NEW BOOKS

Of the approximately 200 new books received by the Army Medical Library each month a few are being chosen, more or less at random, for brief mention here.

GUTHRIE-SMITH, OLIVE F. Rehabilitation Re-Education and Remedial Exercises. London, Baillière, Tindall and Cox, 1943, 484p.

This is a profusely illustrated volume in which the methods of physical treatment and the special types of apparatus used for muscular rehabilitation are described. The suspension methods of the author occupy a prominent place in the book and special chapters deal with joint manipulation, recovery after fractures, chest and maternity cases, electrical treatment and occupational therapy.

LE MARQUAND, H. S. AND F. H. W. TOZER. Endocrine Disorders in Childhood and Adolescence. London, Hodder and Stoughton Ltd., 1943, 298p.

Current ideas of endocrine physiology are first discussed and then the methods of examination by which glandular dysfunctions are ascertained. The remaining chapters deal with the various manifestations of endocrine disorders and include photographs and case histories of numerous patients which have come under the observation of the staff of the out-patient department of the Royal Berkshire Hospital. A table of standardized commercial sex hormone preparations is given.

ABRAMSON, DAVID I. Vascular Responses in the Extremities of Man in Health and Disease. Chicago, The University of Chicago Press, 1944, 418p.

In this monograph the widespread reports in the field of normal and abnormal vascular responses, have been assembled, digested and correlated for the use of students and workers and as a scientific background for the clinician interested in this field. The venous occlusion plethysmographic method is considered to give the most trustworthy information on peripheral circulation and the necessary equipment and technique for its use are described in sufficient detail for the needs of a beginner. The therapy used in peripheral vascular diseases has been evaluated in order to permit a more rational management of these conditions.

ORBAN, BALINT, Editor. Oral Histology and Embryology. St. Louis, The C. V. Mosby Co., 1944, 342p.

In compiling this text, the recent advances in this field have been reviewed and the chapters drafted by recognized authorities and each submitted to the 19 collaborators for discussion. The editor coordinated the different viewpoints and the resulting text represents a sincere effort in scientific cooperation. Each chapter contains remarks on the clinical applications of the basic biologic principles. The text is accompanied by 262 illustrations and 4 color plates.

WEISS, SAMUEL. Clinical Lectures on the Gallbladder and Bile Ducts. Chicago, The Year Book Publishers, Inc., 1944, 504p.

The present recorded knowledge in this field is reviewed and discussed in the light of the author's extensive clinical experience with patients suffering from derangements of the gallbladder and bile ducts. He holds that a text book is merely a compendium of knowledge accumulated by scientific research and that its usefulness is dependent upon the broad understanding and intelligence with which it is applied in the diagnosis and treatment of the patient. Text books may supplement but not be a substitute for medical judgment.

LEVINSON, ABRAHAM. Pioneers of Pediatrics. 2nd. Edition. New York, Froben Press, 1943, 119p.

This monograph is intended to give a bird's eye view of pediatric progress. In all periods there were masters whose contributions have lasted through the ages. Although pediatrics as a special branch of medicine is of comparatively recent origin the care and treatment of children have engaged the attention of medical men from time immemorial. The outstanding ones of these are briefly described and the likenesses of some 28 of them are shown.
